1843.

THE publisher of this work is happy to furnish the citizens of New Haven, this year, as he believes, with a more full and correct catalogue of names than has been given in either of the preceeding numbers. It contains upwards of 3000 names—more by several hundred, than has been published before, making it more valuable for citizens and strangers.

Valuable additions will be found in the Recapitulation, Stage Register, Calendar for 1843-4, Advertisements, and other Notices. SEE INDEX.

NEW HAVEN BURIAL GROUND.

This beautiful cemetery was laid out in the year 1796, under the superintendence of Hon. James Hillhouse. It then comprised only about six acres, but it has since then been enlarged to its present area of eighteen acres. The ground is chiefly divided into family lots each 18 feet in width by 30 in length; but contains also a section of nearly three acres in extent, provided at the cost of the City for a Public Burial Place. Within three years past, extensive improvements have been made in this cemetery. It has been surrounded on all sides, except the front by a substantial and elegant wall of free stone;—a lofty iron fence is now in progress of erection on the front; while, within, the borders the alleys have been liberally ornamented with a large variety of trees and shrubs. The number of family lots is about 750, most of which have been disposed of, yet with proper management, the grounds may accommodate the City for many years.

There are in town, four other Places of Burial; viz. one each in Westville and Fair Haven; one around the Catholic Church, and one at the Alms House.
